EPICFEST

A LITERARY FESTIVAL FOR KIDS OF ALL AGES

Authors will interact with more than 1,500 students, parents and caregivers

EpicFest is an extraordinary, free literary festival that connects families, children and teens to the Library, while strengthening and instilling the love of reading. EpicFest will take place Nov. 6-7, and feature ten award-winning children and young adult authors and illustrators.

On Friday, Nov. 6, the authors will visit 19 different Charlotte-Mecklenburg Schools. On Saturday, Nov. 7, a free literary festival for children, young adults and families will be held at ImaginOn. EpicFest will feature activities to encourage a love of reading in kids of all ages, including LEGO building, robotics, early learning stations for toddlers, a coffee shop for teens, a family concert with Secret Agent 23 Skidoo, a free book for each child attending, and book sales and signings with featured authors.

EpicFest is presented to the community by Wells Fargo, with additional support from NEH, The Charlotte Observer, American Airlines, Publix, Charlotte Parent and the Charlotte Hornets. EpicFest has been made possible through the generosity of the Jim Preston Family and has been created to remember and honor Elizabeth (Libby) Preston's passion for reading and for encouraging and instilling a love of reading in children. EpicFest is expected to reach more than 1,500 students and parents.

"Wells Fargo is proud to partner with the Charlotte Mecklenburg Library Foundation to present EpicFest to children and families in Mecklenburg County," said Jay Everette, Senior Vice President & Community Affairs Manager at Wells Fargo. "EpicFest is a key opportunity to connect caregivers and families with the Library to help develop a child's passion for reading."
